Chief Meyers was an important agent in the eleventh consecutive victory which Rube Marquard accounted for yesterday. With the bivouses filled in the third in-ning the Chief's but crashed into the ball with such impetuosity that it took almost a line flight into the left field stand. The wholesale evacuation of the bases which wholesale evacuation of the bases which followed, four Glants swarming pell mell to the plate, settled the game. The Glants had made three runs just before the Chief goused Salies so feroclously and the two instalments pried up a safe lead for the New Yorks. The score was $ to 3. The third invite was all the clean. The third inning was all the Giants needed to chastise the Cardinals. It was good for seven runs, although one came later for good measure. In putting over the eleventh straight Marquard did not pitch as impressivery as he has done many times. times, but plenty good enough to win without being in trouble. The Rube was somewhat unsteady, but readily took himself in hand with the Cardinals grew restive, and the latters' batting was scat-

The game dracked and dragged There was more idealing than pepper; more pottering than paprika. When the sixth inning crawled around spectators were inning crawled around spectators were leaving in hundreds and more made their exit an inning later. When the hatteries were announced as Marquard and Salice everybody smacked his lips in anticipation of a good game, but so far as any desperate duel between the rival southpaws was concerned expectations were not fulfilled. The lengthy hurlers bulked skyward and filled the air with slimness, and that was all. It was of course no fault of Ricard le Marquis that there ness, and that was all. It was of course no fault of Ricard le Marquis that there wasn't a close game. He and the other Glants too did their share, but Sallee

Giants too did their share, but Sallee disintegrated in the third gound. There after the game was tetter as a sporific, than as a stimulant.

Dale, a pitcher of the younger generation, took Sallee's place after the latter had been dethioned by Bresnahan and held the Glants to three hits and one run, a fact which caused the locals no particular concern, since they were on the street called east. With all of lone's wildness the Glants didn't make much headway against him. In two innings he managed to nil the bases by his exertions, but each time he put the averse twist on his exertions and idanked the present prospective champions. mat condition when Herzon drew four balls and forced Snodgrass home. A moment later they were empty and described, Meyers's home can depopulating them. Fletcher made his account hit of the liming and was thrown out stealing. Throwing to bases was one thing St.

Louis, per Bresnahan, did well.

The Cardinals tallied twice in the fourth on a double by Ellis, a triple by Mowrey and a sacrifice fit. With two on in the fifth and one out. Marquard wouldn't consent to the Cardinals hitting the ball outside the diamond. He scarcely let them hit anywhere, for Dale Struck out and Mages nicked a fly to Meyers. Herzon's two bagger. Meyer's fly, on which the former reached third, and Fletcher's fly, on which he reached the plate, gave the Glants their eighth run, hiowies scored in the sixth on a force, a two bagger by Keney and an infield citt. Mowrey hit for two bases in the clath and died trying to stosten it. Good relaws by Devore and Fletcher to Herzon snuffed him out, Herzon reaching him with a dive as he slid to third. This play was quick, skillful handling of the ball on the part of the three associates concerned in the extinction of Mowrey.

Evans opened on Marquard with a base hit in the ninth. He was forced by Hauser. Oakes fouled out to Hartley, who ran to the stand, a la Meyers, and caught the ball. Bresmhan's double and a pass to Smith put three on bases and then Marquard, provoked at passing Smith, put on areat speed and fanned Mages summarity.

NOTES OF THE DIAMOND.

Let's see, what team was it the High-landers could beat last sesson by merely putting on their uniforms? Oh, yes, the De-troits.

Magee of the Phillies has been playing with a small bone in his hand broken. Which puts it up to the other hand to do most of the work. Acting on orders from his chief. Oakes played over to the right for Fletcher in the third inning and Fletcher shot a two bagger to the place where Oakes had been.

Hauser could have scored in the ninth inning on Bresnahan's two bagger, but the ball hit an automobile, and the re-ground rule Hauser had to return to third base.

A mannerism of Konetchy is to caress his but while waiting for the ball to be pitched. He rubs it gently down the sides and pats it softly on the top, keeping up the fondling until the pitcher winds up. A recent criticism of the Yale nine was that 'The team's hitting ability, very goo at times, has been lamentably weak a others.' Which applies to every other tear in the baseball arena.

In the baseball arena.

Bresnahan, the foxy cuss, buncoed Groh and Murray into letting him grab off a base hit. "Look out." yelled Roger as his dinky ity was dropping into right field. Groh and Murray both "looked out." and the ball fell safely between them. In the seventh inning Umpire Johnstone declared Mages out for Bresnahan's interference, thus preventing a double play. The Cardinal boss was indignant to the bursting point, declaring with all his voice that he didn't interfere.

written by an old member and proposing a revolution in the present method of conducting the athletic end of the club.

After calling attention to the early days of the club, when every man was ar athlete and paid his own expenses, the article points out that at the present time there are about 150 youngsters who are given care, attention, instruction and training at an expense of many thou-sands of dollars a year. Five bundred former athletes and about 500 rooters who attend games and think they are near athletes are strong supporters of the athletic system, while the remaining thirty-five hundred members do not care a rap for athletics.

The article winds up with an appeal to members to discuss the subject in the columns of the club paper. An editorial in the same issue practically gives the indotsement of the club officials to the scheme, for it contains this paragraph:

Should not the Naw York Abdels City. Should not the New York Athlette Club pay greater attention to the health and recreational features of the club. Is it not true that in late

Should not the New York Atsight Club pay greater attention to the health and recreational features of the club? Is it not true that in late years so much money and time have been expended on the development of point winning teams that competitive athetics have over shadowed the recreational sport for which the club was primarily designed?

There is no doubt that any effort to limit the activities of the organization in outside competition will meet with strenuous opposition from the old members of the club, who in their younger days have carried the winged foot to victory on track and field. Not long ago there was a proposition to withdraw from general competition and form a league with such clubs as the Crescent A. C. and Boston A. A. This met with little encouragement at the time, but it is likely that those who conceived the idea have been working quietly and hope to bring a majority of the members to their way of thinking by having the subject ventilated in the club paper.
